americans care what foreigners this book makes the case that they should in these pages jorge castañeda writes from his unique vantage point as a former foreign minister of mexico who has lived studied and worked in america he offers an impressionistic analytical and intuitive review of his experience in the country over the last half century and shows how foreigners can provide perspective on the united states true nature castañeda brings a different viewpoint to issues ranging from purported american exceptionalism uniformity race and religion culture immigration and the death penalty visitors and analysts from dickens to naipaul have generally asked the right questions and described america s most salient features and mysteries but they have not always followed through with answers and explanations castañeda draws from his work with american civil society and government authorities to provide both insight and context americans have long seen their country as exceptional standing outside of history but by comparing its contemporary politics and culture with those of other countries castañeda shows how increasing nationalism and nostalgia are actually making the us more like other countries castañeda admits that most americans have never cared much about what a foreigner thinks about their country but the dynamic is shifting the outside world means more to the us than ever before and americans should care about what foreigners think since they are now so sensitive to what foreigners do since trump s election in 2016 american politics increasingly resemble those of europe latin america and parts of asia such that pining for a lost and glorious past is as american as it is british mexican chinese or italian now the questions that serious knowledgeable and sympathetic foreigners address to americans may be the ones americans ask or should ask for themselves until bayard rustin s lecture in the fall of 1962 no other person had brought author philip reiss so far toward gaining an understanding of what it was like for african americans living as second class citizens in this nation which sponsors a pledge calling for liberty and justice for all the rustin lecture became reiss s point of departure on his quest to learn more fully of the african american experience it prompted him to become aware and to truly understand that the entire nation shared responsibility for the dilemma of deep seated injustices that african americans constantly faced in blue eyes on african american history reiss provides an account of a white professor s learning and teaching about african american history from 1970 to 1999 at a suny community college reiss includes specifics of how and why he took on the challenge of teaching african american history and discusses the historical events he deems critical for understanding of that history his study relates the impact of economic exploitation facilitated by racism and how these twin evils are central to the african american historical narrative along with factual history this volume intersperses some of reiss s experiences as a young boy as a young adult serving in the military and as a professor teaching his course it provides unique insight into a turbulent time in america stunningly designed new editions of toni morrison s best known novels published by vintage classics in celebration of her life and work with a new introduction by candice carty williams author of queenie pecola breedlove longs for blond hair and blue eyes so that she will be as beautiful and beloved as all the

the maintenance of personal health independence and mobility functioning eyes and vision system can reduce an adult's risk of chronic health conditions death falls and injuries social isolation depression and other psychological problems in children properly maintained eye and vision health contributes to a child's social development academic achievement and better health across the lifespan the public generally recognizes its reliance on sight and fears its loss but emphasis on eye and vision health in general has not been integrated into daily life to the same extent as other health promotion activities such as teeth brushing hand washing physical and mental exercise and various injury prevention behaviors a larger population health approach is needed to engage a wide range of stakeholders in coordinated efforts that can sustain the scope of behavior change the shaping of socioeconomic environments can eventually lead to new social norms that promote eye and vision health making eye health a population health imperative vision for tomorrow proposes a new population centered framework to guide action and coordination among various and sometimes competing stakeholders in pursuit of improved eye and vision health and health equity in the united states building on the momentum of previous public health efforts this report also introduces a model for action that highlights different levels of prevention activities across a range of stakeholders and provides specific examples of how population health strategies can be translated into cohesive areas for action at federal state and local levels in 2014 when 15 000 travelers were stranded at airport in dallas texas my wife and i helped a young bengali woman who was visiting the us for the first time we saw to it that she reached her destination safely we remained friends and grew close staying in touch online in vision expert addresses four areas of human vision and provides explanations for why we have those particular abilities complete with a number of full color illustrations to demonstrate his conclusions and to engage the reader written for both the casual reader and the science buff hungry for new information the vision revolution is a resource that dispels commonly believed perceptions about sight and offers answers drawn from the field's most recent research changizi focuses on four why questions 1 why do we see in color 2 why do our eyes face forward 3 why do we see illusions 4 why does reading come so naturally to us why do we see in color it was commonly believed that color vision evolved to help our primitive ancestors identify ripe fruit changizi says we should look closer to home ourselves human color vision evolved to give us greater insights into the mental states and health of other people people who can see color changes in skin have an advantage over their color blind counterparts they can see when people are blushing with embarrassment purple faced with exertion or the reddening of rashes changizi's research reveals that the cones in our eyes that allow us to see color are exquisitely designed exactly for seeing color changes in the skin and it's no coincidence that the primates with color vision are the ones with bare spots on their faces and other body parts changizi shows that the development of color vision in higher primates closely parallels the loss of facial hair culminating in the near hairlessness and highly developed color vision of humans why do our eyes face forward forward facing eyes set us apart from most mammals and there is much dispute as to why we have them while some speculate that we evolved this feature to give us depth perception available through stereo vision this type of vision only allows us to see short distances and we already have other mechanisms that help us to estimate distance changizi s research shows that with two forward facing eyes primates and humans have an x ray ability specifically we re able to see through the cluttered leaves of the forest environment in which we evolved this feature helps primates see their targets in a crowded encroached environment to see how this works hold a finger in front of your eyes you ll find that you re able to look through it at what is beyond your finger one of the most amazing feats of two forward facing eyes our views aren t blocked by our noses beaks etc why do we see illusions we evolved to see moving objects not where they are but where they are going to be without this ability we couldn t catch a ball because the brain s ability to process visual information isn t fast enough to allow us to put our hands in the right place to intersect for a rapidly approaching baseball if our brains simply created a perception of the way the world was at the time light hit the eye then by the time that perception was elicited which takes about a tenth of a second for the brain to do time would have marched on and the perception would be of the recent past changizi explains simply put illusions occur when our brain is tricked into thinking that a stationary two dimensional picture has an element that is moving our brains project the moving element into the future and as a result we don t see what s on the page but what our brain thinks will be the case a fraction of a second into the future why does reading come so naturally to us we can read faster than we can hear which is odd considering that reading is relatively recent this ebook has been formatted to the highest digital standards and adjusted for readability on all devices my own observation of the real condition of the people of our slave states gave me an impression that the cotton monopoly in some way did them more harm than good and although the written narration of what i saw was not intended to set this forth upon reviewing it for the present publication i find the impression has become a conviction he argued that slavery had made the slave states inefficient a set amount of work took 4 times as long in virginia as in the north and backward both economically and socially journeys and explorations in the cotton kingdom was published during the first six months of the american civil war at the suggestion of olmsted s english publisher to this he wrote a new introduction in which he stated explicitly his views on the effect of slavery on the economy and social conditions of the southern states
