a most wonderful source for collectors of medals to the indian army papers presented to j e littlewood on his 80th birthday issued as 3d ser v 14 a 1965 this study analyzes the operational performance of the 28th infantry division during a period of high intensity combat in the european theater of operations the focus is on the difficulties the division experienced within its subordinate infantry units infantrymen though comprising less than 40 percent of the division s total strength absorbed almost 90 percent of all casualties the high casualty rate within infantry units severely curtailed the operational performance of the division the difficulties the 28th experienced were commonplace in the european theater compounding the problem was the inadequate number of divisions in the u s army force structure this inadequacy forced divisions to remain in combat for excessive durations greatly increasing battle and non battle casualties the army s personnel system further contributed to the problems infantry divisions experienced within their infantry units it failed to provide sufficient numbers of infantry replacements in a timely manner and there was widespread dissatisfaction with the quality of infantry replacements this study shows that the u s army failed to realize both the importance of infantry units to the war effort and the severity of combat on the modern battlefield the result was an infantry force structure poorly designed to accomplish its wartime mission the stress of war tries men as no other test that they have encountered in civilized life like a crucial experiment it exposes the underlying physiological and psychological mechanisms of the human being exceedingly valuable lessons can be learned from it regarding the methods by which men adapt themselves to all forms of stress either in war or in peace under sufficient stress any individual may show failure of adaptation evidenced by neurotic symptoms such symptoms then are pathological only in a comparative sense when contrasted with the symptoms of those still making successful adaptations while the material in this book concerns flying personnel almost exclusively the psychological mechanisms under discussion in this book are those that apply to everyman in his struggle to master his own environment in this realm a hair divides the normal from the neurotic the adaptive from the non adaptive the failures of adaptation of the soldier described herein mirror everyman s everyday failures or neurotic compromises with reality the book s material is roughly divided into a discussion of war neuroses appearing overseas and those in combat veterans returned home for relief from flying or for rehabilitation men under stress covers a vast array of topics beginning with the background and selection of flight personnel followed by seventeen chapters on the combat environment and reactions to it which include the subjects of morale combat stress psychodynamics emotional disorders and neurotic reactions guilt and depression aggression and hostility psychosomatic states psychotic like states and the treatment modalities of psychotherapy narcosynthesis and adjunctive treatment the book closes with two chapters on civilian applications including civilian psychiatry and general social implications the teacher s handbook serves as an aid in curriculum development and daily lesson planning suggested daily lesson plans suggested assignments following each lesson plan teaching tips for each unit suggested examinations for the semester and answer keys for the written exercises and unit review worksheets it also suggests ways to successfully integrate keyboard and computer technology into the curriculum
