data on water quality and other environmental issues are being collected at an ever increasing rate in the past however the techniques used by scientists to interpret this data have not progressed as quickly this is a book of modern statistical methods for analysis of practical problems in water quality and water resources the last fifteen years have seen major advances in the fields of exploratory data analysis eda and robust statistical methods the real life characteristics of environmental data tend to drive analysis towards the use of these methods these advances are presented in a practical and relevant format alternate methods are compared highlighting the strengths and weaknesses of each as applied to environmental data techniques for trend analysis and dealing with water below the detection limit are topics covered which are of great interest to consultants in water quality and hydrology scientists in state provincial and federal water resources and geological survey agencies the practising water resources scientist will find the worked examples using actual field data from case studies of environmental problems of real value exercises at the end of each chapter enable the mechanics of the methodological process to be fully understood with data sets included on diskette for easy use the result is a book that is both up to date and immediately relevant to ongoing work in the environmental and water sciences have investors used nafta chapter 11 to thwart the fair application of environmental protection measures are the compensation awards discouraging governments from taking environmental protection measures they would otherwise want to take this report empirically reviews four arbitrations under chapter 11 to try to answer those two questions the case studies address the first question objectively the government paid compensation in three cases metalclad ethyl and s d myers in which the government had little scientific information to support its action and the surrounding circumstances strongly indicate that environmental protection was a cover for local political battles and economic motivations in the two cases against canada the federal government withdrew the measure in question and the underlying environmental issue later resolved itself through changes in technology and market pressures nine years after metalclad filed its case against mexico the ecological zone declared by the state governor to block the landfill has yet to be formally created or funded there is no modern hazardous waste disposal capacity in industrialized central mexico pre existing environmental contamination at the site still has not been cleaned up and mexico has had to compensate a spanish investor in a similar case in the fourth nafta arbitration methanex a canadian methanol producer the investor was held not to have a claim under chapter 11 because the regulation affected a product made by others with methanol not methanol itself moreover the chapter 11 tribunal concluded that california had identified a legitimate environmental problem and conducted independent scientific assessment before adopting the mtbe ban and thus had not acted with deliberate intent to favor a domestic competitor the answer to the second question is chapter 11 chilling government environmental protection efforts is more elusive and subjective but the report infers from the available evidence that the chilling effect if it exists at all is not significant after metalclad mexico improved environmental regulation with new legislation to establish a national strategy for management of hazardous waste and to improve transparency of public decision making the circumstances in canada are less clear but ethyl s fuel additive is scarcely used any more in canada and the handling of pcb wastes involved in s d myers has shifted to technologies besides stationary incinerators in the united states the methanex chapter 11 claim did not dissuade other states from following california in banning mtbe moreover the dismissal of the methanex claim shows that chapter 11 does not create an easy route to challenge environmental measures after the four early cases studied here only one chapter 11 claim in the last five years involves substantive matters of environmental regulation meanwhile the governments have made chapter 11 procedures significantly more open and transparent this textbook covers the full range of topics and issues normally included in a course on economic growth and development both mainstream economic perspectives as well as the multi paradigmatic inter disciplinary and dynamic evolutionary perspectives from heterodox economics are detailed economic development is viewed in terms of the long run well being of humanity social stability environmental sustainability and just distribution of economic gains not simply as the growth of gdp furthermore this textbook explicitly recognizes the complexity of economic development by linking economic activity to our broader social and natural environments the textbook s unique feature is its focus on the natural environment both the historical effects of economic development on the environment and the environmental constraints on future economic development are thoroughly discussed in two chapters on environmental issues and policies in fact because economic development is defined in terms of economic social and environmental sustainability the natural environment is included in discussions throughout the book the textbook is inter disciplinary knowledge from fields such as sociology psychology political science economic history and ecology is called on to enhance the economic analysis a thorough historical account of the development of the principal paradigms of economic development is also included and the important issues of institutional development and cultural change merit their own chapters two chapters on technological change holistically focus on production technologies as well as the dynamic performance of entire economic social and ecological systems also the important relationship between economic development and globalization is presented in three chapters on international trade international finance and investment and immigration from both orthodox and heterodox chapter 11 of the treaty a multi lateral investment agreement was introduced which was unprecedented in scope for the first time private investors from any nafta country were provided with an independent right of action directly against a host government the objective underlying chapter 11 was to facilitate foreign investment among nafta countries by providing assurances to investors that their investments would be protected against undue regulatory interference as such a central consideration as to the effectiveness of chapter 11 is the speed impartiality and efficiency with which investment disputes are settled this requires that courts charged with reviewing chapter 11 investment arbitrations operate consistently and with a high degree of deference this thesis examines the jurisprudence relating to the judicial review of chapter 11 arbitrations with an eye towards the consistency and deference applied to the extent that courts do demonstrate inconsistency and lack of deference this thesis explores whether canada ought to ratify the icsid convention as a means of precluding judicial review and facilitating fdi flows among nafta countries to answer this question this thesis examines some of the problems inherent in icsid along with the levels of consistency and deference applied by icsid's annulment committees vis à vis the north american courts through such an analysis this thesis endeavours to recommend a policy course for the harper government to pursue as it relates to nafta chapter 11 and the ratification of the icsid convention and proposes some
